OLDTIMERS TO RETURN JULY 9-10-11

Bishop J. M. Marling Confers Degrees on 39 Grads Sunday

His Excellency, the Most Rev. Joseph M. Marling, C.P.P.S., Ph.D., Auxiliary Bishop of Kansas City, and alumnus of St. Joseph's, conferred degrees upon the 39 members of the Class of 1949, and delivered the Baccalaureate Address at the 54th annual Commencement Exercises, Sunday afternoon, June 12, in the College Theatre.

An academic procession of faculty and graduates preceded a Pontifical High Mass celebrated by Bishop Marling Sunday morning.

Immediately after the Mass, a

bronze plaque bearing names of 43 former students killed in World War II, was unveiled and blessed. Presented by the class of '49, the plaque is mounted in the chapel vestibule, matching the one for World War I.

Pictures of St. Joseph's 1949 graduates are on pages two and three of this issue.

Diocesan Press Meet Held Here on May 22

Fifty Catholic parish and organizational correspondents from the diocese of Lafayette assembled at the college Sunday, May 22, for the Diocesan Press Convention. The institute was aimed at informing reporters of the requirements of both the secular and Catholic newspapers.

Attendees heard talks by the Rev. Alfred J. Zanolari, college president; the Rev. R. H. Esser, college professor of English; Clifford B. Ward, editor, Ft. Wayne News-Sentinel; W. F. Fink, managing editor, Our Sunday Visitor; and the Rev. James E. Quinn, editor, Lafayette edition, Our Sunday Visitor.

Catholic Building Convention Regarded Highly by Bishops

Statements released by the Rev. Alfred J. Zanolari, president of St. Joseph's College, indicate the Catholic hierarchy's high regard for the National Catholic Building Convention and Exposition which the college sponsored for the second consecutive year, June 14-16, at the Stevens Hotel, Chicago.

His Eminence Cardinal Stritch, archbishop of Chicago and honorary chairman of the convention and exposition, has said: "I think that one of the most interesting things attached to the preliminaries of this conference has been that without much advertisement it has attracted interest all over the country. When it was announced it seemed to hit a need in the life of the Church in this country."

"I hope that this isn't just an isolated conference on building. I hope that from time to time we shall have other conferences, because it is my conviction that if we gather together to discuss the common problems which we face on building, we shall all derive much benefit from a discussion of the subject."

Three Sessions

Divided into three main sessions—architecture, building materials and contracting—the 1949 convention also held special programs for religious superiors, diocesan building committees and school administrators. All speakers and panel members were taken from fields of greatest interest to Catholic institutional builders.

Father Zanolari said that approval of the National Catholic Building Convention and Exposition has come from nearly all United States bishops.

Announce Alumni, Pursley Winners

Winners in the Alumni Essay and the Mary J. Pursley Memorial Award for Creative Writing Contests have just been announced by the Rev. Rufus Esser, chairman of the division of languages and humanities.

Fifteen entries were judged in the Alumni Essay Contest. First prize of $25.00 was won by sophomore Lowell E. Brown, Versailles, Ohio, and the second prize of $15.00 by Ernst W. Sauer, a junior from Breese, Ill. Another sophomore, John R. Dueweke, of Centerline, Mich., received honorable mention.

The Mary J. Pursley Award of $50.00 went to James A. Froelich, a sophomore from Defiance, Ohio. A Chicago senior, Joseph Condoch, placed second, with James Froelich and Ernst Sauer following in third and fourth places. Twenty-eight students entered this contest.

Your Investment

Following a suggestion appearing in books on alumni fund raising, Contact! approaches loyal St. Joe men in the mellow month of commencement with a timely reminder.

Concisely, do you recall that letter Father Jim Conroy, our alumni president, dispatched to you last April 5? It was a letter asking for money, of course, but the missive is still being hailed as aptly done and we are reasonably sure the letter came to your attention. May we summarize it?

It was just about the most potent appeal that has ever been framed in behalf of St. Joseph's College. It announced the forming (by alumni and entirely independent of the college) of the SJC Alumni Foundation, with the purpose of collecting funds sent in by alumni for needy students, some of them athletes.

St. Joseph's, last year alone, spent $21,000 out of its own purse helping needy students. Accrediting agencies have criticised this practice. Your alumni officers, seeing a way to remove an important obstacle keeping St. Joseph's out of the academic big leagues, and feeling the alumni body at large would put shoulder to the wheel, unanimously moved to form the foundation.

A month rolled by and donations started coming in. Contact! wishes to make it clear that those who responded to date have done nobly, even surpassing the seven-dollar average suggested as a goal in Father Jim's letter.

One difficulty exists: not enough of the 3,645 St. Joe men on alumni roles have "come across" to make the drive a success. The time to reconsider this matter and send your check to the ALUMNI FOUNDATION, COLLEGEVILLE, IND., is at once, to permit the setting up of a satisfactory budget for September.

If you want to use the foundation in a more personal way, perhaps you and a few other alumni in a certain area want to hand-pick your own protege and help him obtain what still continues as an outstanding value in Catholic education.

St. Joseph's stands today on the verge of accreditation by the North Central Association. Your alma mater has traveled fast and well the path of time leading from the junior college days to the present. Much has been accomplished in the short span of 13 years to make St. Joseph's a good, Catholic college.

Thinking of you, of present students and of those you may be sending to the college, St. Joseph's needs your assistance now to achieve accreditation.

Let's not keep the college in the "twilight zone" of the big leagues. Fifty-two have "invested" $670 to date.

If you've mislaid that Alumni Foundation letter, simply send that check to the Alumni Foundation, Collegeville, Ind., and be in on a mighty, cooperative effort for your school, St. Joseph's.

Contact! thought you wouldn't mind hearing about this again. Thanks for whatever help you can give.

Alumni Reunion Ready to Honor '99, '24 Classes

Mass, Dinner, Songs, Election, Golf Set For Get Together

Keep July 9-10-11 open if you can, for then all the oldtimers will be back to St. Joseph's for the annual alumni reunion. Nominations for new alumni officers appear elsewhere in this issue. An advance meeting of alumni directors will plan the program and from all appearances there'll be plenty doing.

In the center of the stage will be the class of 1899: living members are Rt. Rev. Msgr. Thomas P. Travers, pastor of St. Mary's church, Anderson, Ind., and vicar general of the Lafayette diocese; Rt. Rev. Msgr. Felix T. Seroczyński, pastor of St. Charles church, Muncie, Ind., dean of the Muncie deanery and diocesan consultor; the Rev. Ildephonse J. Rapp, professor of English at St. Joseph's; the Rev. Frank J. Kuenle, pastor of St. Anthony's church, Dayton, O.; Otto T. Holtschneider, Jefferson City, Mo.; and Bernard H. Recker, Ottawa, O.

Tribute will be paid to the memory of the following deceased members of the class of 1899: Precious Blood Fathers Theodore B. Sauer, Vitus A. Schuette, Pius A. Kanney and laymen Charles A. Uphaus, Charles F. Fralich and George Diefenbach.

Forty-two members of the silver jubilee class of 1924 will also be honored. Among this group are the Most Rev. Joseph M. Marling, auxiliary bishop of Kansas City, and the following members of St. Joseph's faculty: Fathers Herber, Kroekel, Pax and Roof, and Brother John Marling.

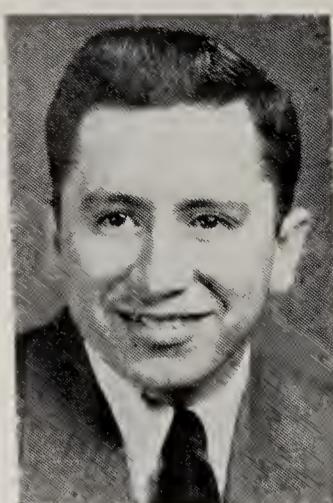

All former students are invited to make reservations for alumni days, particularly those who left the campus 50, 25, 20, 15, 10 and five years ago.

Indianapolis Alumni Bring Prospects to Campus

PROSPECTIVE ST. JOE STUDENTS from Indianapolis toured the campus May 22 as guests of Indianapolis alumni. Their hosts here were the Rev. J. A. Otte and students Bill McCaslin, Bill Taylor and John Weaver. Alumni escorts were Judge Joseph Howard, Robert Cunningham, Bill Moran and Hugh Davey.

Gorman Hurls Pumas to Win Over Eastern

Mike Beaven, freshman third baseman, poled two long home runs, May 14, to lead St. Joe to a 9-6 victory over a highly-touted Eastern Illinois aggregation before a large Prom Day gathering on the local field.

Chuck Gorman hurled steady ball to gain credit for his first win of the season, although he required the assistance of lefty Don Tesmond in the eighth frame.

The Pumas obtained a brace of runs in the opening stanza. Wally Moore led off with a single and scored ahead of Angel Barrientos when Illinois left-fielder, Anderson, permitted the Collegeville shortstop's normal single to skip through him for a three-base error.

The home club stashed the game away in their turn in the sixth by tallying four times. A pass to Tom Quinn preceded a double by Jerry Leahy, a walk to Beaven, a single by Moore, and another two-base wallop by Barrientos. Leahy stole home to highlight the production.

Netters Fifth At Little State

St. Joe netmen hung up their racquets for the 1949 season following competition in the Little State meet at Earlham May 26-28. Entering in a crowd of ten participating teams, the Cardinal and Purple emerged a successful fifth with decisive wins over Valparaiso, Indiana State, Canterbury, Taylor, and Anderson. The meet was won by Tri-State College of Angola.

Cardinals Even Count; Win 12-8

The high scoring ball game, which has taken precedence over the pitcher's battle at Puma park this season, was in evidence once again, May 17, as Ball State slammed out a 12-8 win over Dick Scharf's charges. In evening matters with St. Joe for the season, the Cardinals rapped four Puma pitchers for 15 hits, among which were included a home run, three triples, and a double. The locals were also in a hitting mood. They obtained 13 safe shots off State ace, Orval Reed.

Valpo Falls To Powerful Puma Hitting

The pitching wasn't in evidence but the hitting certainly was, May 22, when three twirlers toiled for the Pumas during a 15-11 victory over Valparaiso on the Collegeville campus. None of the three were particularly masterful in their roles, but fortunately neither were three Crusader chuckers who fell victim to 15 hits and the Pumas' second seven-run inning of the week.

INTRAMURALS

For the second straight year, the "Peaceful Greeks of the 12-inch League batted their way to the Intramural crown. Their season record shows nine wins against one loss.

A five-way tie exists for second place in the league with the Youngsters, Lazy Nine, Towners, Mongolians and the Herd O' Turties deadlocked with records of seven wins against three losses.

Indiana State Wins 12 to 6

Ray Reschan's sharp double to left field sparked Indiana State to a five-run seventh inning and sent the Sycamores winging to a 12-6 verdict over St. Joe, May 27, on the Collegeville diamond. The contest was the finale for the Pumas who finished the campaign with a 6-9 record. By winning the Staters raised their season mark to 11 victories in 13 games.

Prior to Reschan's sock Maurie Hamilton, surprise St. Joe starter, had been hurling on even terms with the Sycamores' Darrel Wible.

Golfers Win 2 Lose 3, Tie 1

The Puma golf squad ended its 1949 season May 27 with a record of two wins against three losses and one tie.

On May 13, the Cardinal and Purple "divot diggers" traveled to Canterbury and defeated the defending team 15-6 in a five-man match. Low scorer of the day was St. Joe's Bill Miller who tallied a 77. Don Schubert tied for second with a 79.

Christian Humanism

Matthew Arnold, writing a famous essay in the nineteenth century, elucidated the distinction between Hellenism and Hebraism, two heritages from the ancient world that, though seemingly in conflict, have combined to form our European culture. Neither has ever been static; both, historically, have gone through periods of rise and decline, sometimes independently of each other and more often in complementary processes. Arnold proceeds to show that for many centuries the Hellenic aim of self-culture following basically the ideal of clear intelligence, rational truth, was in large measure superseded by the Hebraic aim of self-conquest in express pursuit of justice, goodness—first with main emphasis on righteousness through firm obedience to God's law, and later with emphasis on virtue through conformity to the image of a self-sacrificing Exemplar. Christianity, this latter phase of Hebraism, Arnold admitted to be the more attractive development. Nevertheless, he then proceeded to "equalize" Hellenism and Hebraism and to show that the latter had in the rhythmic periodicity of history reached its term while, since the Renaissance, the former was happily in the ascendancy. But this outmoded Hebraism seems, in Arnold's view, to have been almost synonymous with Puritanism rather than with its greater expression, Christianity, which indeed passed out of consideration in the last part of his essay. This may be ascribed partly to the prevalence of Calvinism in England since the Reformation era, but is more likely an expression of that peculiar obtuseness to true Christianity shown by so many agnostics and liberals.

Many writers, indeed, since Arnold's day have followed him in their praise of Hellenism, their grudging salute to Hebraism's false-face, Puritanism, as they filch from it a few norms of conduct, and their quite determined ignoring of Catholic Christianity. Theirs would seem to be the frame of mind of Martha objecting to the reopening of her brother's tomb. But true Christian culture is not dead. If Hellenism was Indo-European in origin and Hebraism was Semitic in tone, Christianity is divine; and it is as alive as God, as the Risen Christ Whose culture it proclaims.

Ideally, Christianity includes the other two principles; historically, it absorbed the best of what they had accomplished. The Catholic Church admits with the Greek philosopher that man is an animal endowed with reason, whose (supreme) dignity is in the intellect; she states with the Hebrew prophet that man is a free individual in personal relation to God, his (supreme) righteousness consisting in a voluntary obedience to God's law; but she then proclaims with Christ that man is a sinful, wounded creature, called, however, to divine life through revealed truth, his supreme perfection consisting in love of the three-personed Good in the glorious beauty of grace. Natural humanism, quite eclectic as it developed historically, recognizes claims of wisdom, practical prudence, and taste in proper blend. Some philosophers, zealots, and artists have at various times sought in unbalanced manner happiness and fulfillment in truth alone, justice alone, or beauty alone, only to discover the insufficiency of such attempts to limit the music of life to a single string. Christian Humanism, end of Catholic college education, cultivates intelligence, conscience, and taste in the light of both reason and revelation with the powers of both nature and grace. Saint Joseph's aims to help its students to grow, as did Christ, in wisdom and age and grace before God and men. Doing so they live Christian Humanism.—Rev. R. H. Esser
